

THE EXECUTOR'S DESK

Scripts & Letters Pack

Thirteen more phone scripts and seven more letters for the conversations executors dread: collectors, siblings, employers, landlords, the DMV, the pension office, and the relative who wants the car this weekend.

Companion to The First 90 Days. Fill in the brackets, read it out loud if you need to, and log every call. United States edition. General information, not legal advice; where a rule depends on your state, check with the probate court in the county where your parent lived.

Scripts for the calls that stall

BROKERAGE OR MUTUAL FUND COMPANY

"I'm calling about accounts held by [name], who died on [date]. I'm the executor. I need three things: the date-of-death value of each holding, the name of any transfer-on-death beneficiary, and the exact forms and documents your estate services team needs to retitle or liquidate. Please open a case number and email me the checklist." They will want a Medallion signature guarantee for transfers; ask where you can get one before you need it.

PENSION ADMINISTRATOR OR FORMER EMPLOYER HR

"[Name] was a retiree or former employee; they died on [date]. Please stop any pension payments effective the date of death, tell me whether a survivor benefit or a return of contributions applies and to whom, tell me whether any payment issued after the death must be returned, and send the claim forms. Also, was there any group life insurance or unpaid vacation pay?"

DMV (TITLE TRANSFER)

"I'm the executor for [name], who died on [date]. There's a vehicle titled in their name alone. What do you need to transfer or sell it: certified Letters, the death certificate, the title, an affidavit? Is there a small-estate form for vehicles, and does it have a waiting period?"

LANDLORD OR PROPERTY MANAGER (PARENT WAS RENTING)

"[Name] died on [date] and I'm handling the estate. I'd like to know the lease end date and whether state law lets the estate end it early on a death, what notice you need, and how the security deposit will be returned to the estate. We'll clear the unit by [date]; please don't dispose of anything before then."

MEDICAL BILLING OFFICE OR HOSPITAL

"I'm calling about bills for [name], who died on [date]. Please send an itemized statement for all dates of service to me as executor at [address], and confirm whether Medicare or the supplemental plan has been billed. Claims against the estate go through the probate process; I am not agreeing to pay personally. Please note the account as 'deceased, estate pending.'"

MORTGAGE SERVICER

"The borrower died on [date]. I'm the executor. I want to keep the loan current while the estate is settled. Please note me as the authorized contact, send statements to [address], and tell me what you need to discuss payoff or assumption. Federal rules let a successor in interest get information about the loan; please treat this as my request to be confirmed as one."

STORAGE UNIT, GYM, SUBSCRIPTION SERVICE

"[Name] died on [date]. Please cancel the contract as of the date of death and refund any prepaid period to 'The Estate of [name].' I can send a death certificate copy. Please confirm in writing that no further charges will be made."

Scripts for pressure

DEBT COLLECTOR CALLING ABOUT YOUR PARENT'S DEBT

"I'm the executor of [name]'s estate. I am not personally responsible for this debt. Send any claim, in writing, to me at [address] with an itemized statement and proof of the debt. Do not call other family members about this account. I'm noting the date and time of this call." Then hang up. Do not confirm the balance, do not promise anything, do not give your own information beyond the mailing address.

COLLECTOR SAYING YOU MUST PAY BECAUSE YOU ARE THE CHILD / USED THE CARD / LIVE IN THE HOUSE

"Put the legal basis for that in writing and mail it to me. Until then, I consider this a claim against the estate only." Children are not liable for a parent's debts unless they co-signed or held the account jointly. A few states have spouse-only exceptions.

SIBLING WHO WANTS THEIR SHARE NOW

"I get it, and I want this done as much as you do. Here's the constraint: I'm not allowed to distribute anything until the creditor claim period closes on [date] and the taxes are reserved for. If I pay early and a claim comes in, the law makes me personally repay it. I'll send everyone the same update on the first of each month, and I'll tell you the moment a partial distribution is possible."

RELATIVE WHO WANTS TO TAKE THE CAR, THE TOOLS, THE RING THIS WEEKEND

"Nothing can leave the house until the inventory is done and photographed; that protects all of us, including you. Once it's done, here's how we're dividing personal things: [method]. If Mom's will names you for that item, it's yours and I'll get it to you after the inventory."

SIBLING WHO THINKS YOU ARE HIDING SOMETHING

"You're entitled to see everything, and you will. Here's the inventory as it stands, here's the estate account statement, and here's the list of what's still unknown. Ask me anything; I'll answer in the group email so everyone sees the same thing."

SOMEONE OFFERING TO BUY THE HOUSE "AS IS, FOR CASH, THIS WEEK"

"Thank you. The estate will get a licensed appraisal first and any sale will be at or near market value with the beneficiaries informed. If you'd like to make an offer after that, send it in writing." You have a duty to get fair value. Quick cash offers rarely are.

Letters, set one

Notice to beneficiaries and heirs that you have been appointed

[Date]

Dear [name],

On [date] the [county] probate court appointed me [executor / personal representative] of the estate of [parent's name], who died on [date]. A copy of the Letters is enclosed.

My job is to gather the estate's assets, pay its valid debts and taxes, and then distribute what remains according to the will [or state law]. The court process takes months; distributions come at the end so that no one has to return money later. I will send everyone the same written update on the first of each month.

Please send me your current mailing address, phone and email, and let me know if you prefer updates by mail. If you have questions, reply to this letter or email; I will answer everyone at once so we all have the same information.

Sincerely,

[Your name], as [title] of the Estate of [parent's name]
